Getting your money back for those pricey textbooks may now be easier.	Random textbooks
The Humber Students' Federation has just opened a used book exchange on campus.	Poster outside bookstore.
The bookstore was a promise made by HSF President Joey Svec during his presidential campaign.	Set up shots of inside bookstore and Joey.
	Interview: Joey Svec- why, and how it is good for students
To sell your book at the store, you pick a price, they shelve it, and when it sells, you receive the full amount.	More bookstore shots
The used bookstore across the road works the same way except they keep 20 per cent of the profits.	Text Centre shots
The owner of the Text Centre says he is not threatened by HSF's new endeavor.
	Interview: Ali – as long as it is helping students
Some Humber students already plan on selling their textbooks at the new store for next semester.	Student Centre Shots
